A Stern-Wheel Packet Burns to the Water's Edge.

An Exploding Lamp Causes the Destruction of the Boat.

All the Passengers Escaped With Most of the Baggage. One Chambermaid Remained. That Person Was Missing—Harold Work.

POMEROY, O., April 4.—At 8 o'clock Wednesday morning the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati packet, Iron Queen, was consumed by fire at Antiquity, twelve miles above here. She was lying at the bank putting off freight when the fire broke out. All the passengers were saved.

One chambermaid was lost in the iron queen disaster. Name not obtainable. All the baggage was saved, with most of the baggage. The boat was bound for Pittsburgh, passing here at 5 p. m. At Racine, ten miles above here, she had on board straw and moved a mile further up to Antiquity to take on a large amount of hoghead pork. While lying at the bank there, a lamp exploded in the engine room, setting the rear part of the boat on fire, which rapidly communicated to the forward part.

The loss can not be ascertained here, as there is no telephone or telegraphic communication with that place. A telephone man, Mr. T. M. Shriver, mate of the Iron Queen, from Racine, O., says that there were thirty passengers on board, four or five from Cincinnati, some from Cleveland and fifteen from the lumbering West.

Some of the ladies had to be carried off. Mate Shriver, whose home is at Manchester, had a narrow escape. He was surrounded by the flames, and had to jump into the river to save himself. He was badly burned about the face and hands. Mrs. Capt. Lay, of Ironton, was on board with her son.

Most of the passengers will be sent to their destination by rail. The Queen was without doubt the finest steamer on the upper Ohio river, and was valued at $100,000, thought to be partially insured.

The conductors of the officers in their great effort to save the passengers in the Iron Queen disaster.

PITTSBURGH, April 4.—It is rumored here that three persons are missing from the vessel Iron Queen, burned at Antiquity, O., Wednesday morning.

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—The remains of Maud and Harry Williams, who were murdered by the explosion of the park hotel, Sunday night, were buried at Greenview cemetery Wednesday morning.

The bodies had remained at the morgue, on East Broad street, since the coroner took charge of them, and then the friends gathered at ten o'clock.

The undertaker had placed both bodies in one coffin. The grieving women in their pockets had been drawn together and the emergency was such that one could not see but that they had died natural deaths and clapped in each other's arms. The mother, who was touching indeed to those who knew the circumstances of their death.

Williams, the father, accompanied by Annie, his daughter, who was alone saved her from death at her mother's hands, and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lester, at whose home Mrs. Williams was arrested. Mother arrived early at the morgue. Williams was deeply affected and wept bitterly. Mr. Lester said he would break down crying.
